How has Sam helped others?

"Sam is really amazing at helping Individuals and Organisations understand how to use the incredible talents of those with autism, particularly in the IT sector. She is a very relevant and enthusiastic speaker who will engage your audiences and provide huge value to your organisation." - Yvonne Emery

Very authentic, vulnerable and powerful speaker! Amongst an ocean of speakers there is this gem, Sam with her incredible depth and strength! It's a pleasure to listen to Sam and to learn from her in the most effortless way! She was amazing at our event recently and I highly recommend her! - Olga Geidane

I have just spent a most fun, insightful & thought provoking hour with Sam Warner. I first came across Sam at an EMCC UK webinar and immediately thought "here is someone I can work with". Sam generously gave me the benefit of her experience & knowledge as I explored key questions about Neurodiversity. She made it easy to understand, was extremely knowledgeable, generously shared her own experiences, busted some classic myths, & gave me a wealth of useful resources to continue my learning. If you are asking yourself similar questions, then I can thoroughly recommend Sam. - Jaqueline Hill

"I cannot recommend Sam enough. Her expertise in neurodiversity is truly exceptional. She generously shared her knowledge and time, helping me gain a deeper understanding of neurodiversity and its implications for training and speaking facilitation. Sam's insights have been invaluable in tailoring my approach to better connect with diverse audiences. Working with her was not only professionally enriching but also a genuine pleasure. Sam is a dedicated and knowledgeable professional who goes above and beyond to make a positive impact. I highly recommend her to anyone seeking expertise in neurodiversity and inclusive facilitation." - Rachael Edmondson-Clarke

Why should you listen to Sam?

Sam is Autistic, has ADHD, Dyslexia, Dyspraxia, Pathological Demand Avoidance and Sensory Processing Differences. She started Get Your Message Across in 2008 after feeling frustrated at the lack of reasonable adjustments, accommodations and adaptations being offered at work and the painful lack of knowledge about neurodiversity in the workplace per say.

Sam has over 25+ years of experience in corporate, in multiple industries predominantly in IT in various roles, and shares her lived experience and personal stories in her talks.

She developed the The New Rules of Engagement TM in answer to multiple teams asking for help with communication difficulties, talent acquisition and retention.

Sam has spent 14 years in Toastmasters International and the Professional Speaking Association honing her professional speaking skills. She regularly delivers public speaking courses into local schools.
